Dr Ali Nasseh How Endodontists Obturate RCTs

Wednesday July 28 2021, 1pm
$50+gst

Lecture Objectives/Questions that will be addressed:

1. Why is Hydraulic Condensation (HC) the fastest growing obturation technique globally?
2. Is retreatment HC cases easy?
3. Can I do warm vertical compaction with BC Sealer?
4. How critical is Tug-Back with HC?
5. Is HC a single cone technique?
6. How does HC compare to thermoplastic and carrier based obturation techniques?
7. What happens if I overfill?
8. What's the clinical success rate of HC compared to other techniques?
9. Should you inject sealer directly into the canal or apply with traditional means?

Speaker Bio

Dr Nasseh was born in Iran but left after the 1979 revolution, living in Brussels & Belgium before moving to the United States to study Biochemistry in Los Angeles. He moved to Chicago in 1990 to attend Northwestern University Dental School, and then to Boston to complete Endodontic training at Harvard School of Dental Medicine in 1997. There, Dr Nasseh received a Master in Medical Sciences in the area of bone biology following 3 years of research in an orthopaedic laboratory at Boston Children's Hospital. After graduation, he began teaching in Harvard's Post-Doctoral Endodontic Program, and began clinical practice as an Endodontist in a large multi-specialty group practice. During early 2000, Ali built a solo endodontic practice that quickly grew to four endodontists, where he continued to practice full time and teach part time.

In 2008, Ali decided to go to film school to pursue another area of passion. In 2013, the program director at Harvard, Dr. Kenneth Koch, who had left Harvard in the 1990s to create a private endodontic education company called Real World Endo, retired from his position as president and asked Ali to run the organization he had founded and developed with his business partner, Dr. Dennis Brave. Ali joined as the Chief Executive Officer and President of Real World Endo and began to apply his film and technology knowledge to his endodontic and pedagogical experience to develop Real World Endo's next phase, where he shares endodontic knowledge worldwide through the Internet.

Cancellations will be refunded up to 24 hours before event.
