Whitening FAQ

What causes tooth discolouration?

Everyone's teeth are unique, therefore they discolour and stain in different ways. The discolouration or staining of a tooth is typically caused by strong coloured foods and liquids such as coffee, curry or from smoking cigarettes.

How does tooth whitening work?

When a whitening product is applied to the tooth, it breaks down into water and oxygen ions. The oxygen ions enter the enamel and attack the long stain molecules to effectively break them down to be short and colourless. These short and colourless molecules are then naturally removed from the tooth by saliva. The intensity of whitening is related to the number of ions available and the length of time they are on the tooth.

How long does it take to whiten a patient's teeth?

With In-Clinic whitening, results may be obtained in just 30 minutes treatment time. Using a take home whitening system may take approximately 5-14 days.

How long will the whitening treatment last?

Teeth whitening is an irreversible dental procedure and the time frame in which the treatment will last is dependent on the individual person and their oral habits. Teeth whitening can be repeated from 6-12 months for both in-office and take home procedures.

How does whitening affect restorations and veneers?

Whitening will remove any existing stains on the restorations and veneers, but will not affect the original shade.

Are there any side effects?

Please consult the instructions for use. The vast majority of people will experience no side effects. However, some will experience temporary sensitivity (dull or sharp, sensitivity to hot or cold). This will subside after several hours and won't leave any residual problems. The wear times can be shortened or made less frequent. The patient should abstain from carbonated drinks, citrus fruits and beverages to avoid sensitivity.

Is teeth whitening safe during pregnancy?

It is not recommended to use teeth whitening products during pregnancy.
